SOCIETY DRAMA WINS HONOLULU

Richard Buhler And Company Make Big Hit

Shows worth the while, from a professional standpoint, so seldom are seen in Honolulu that when one does come theater-goers usually fight shy a little before expressing an opinion or even attending the initial performance. This, however, was not the case last night. The "show-fans" of Honolulu were all there to see "The Climbers" from the man in the bald-headed row, to whom the dainty soubrette threw kisses, to the small boy in the topmost seat in "heaven," who stamped and whistled through his fingers at every opportunity.

Richard Buhler is good. He is known here, and his popularity was testified to last night when the audience applauded him to the echo as he made his first appearance on the stage. For that matter, there seemed to be a sort of welcoming fraternity in the audience, for as each new face came before the footlights it was the signal for a burst of applause. And it was deserved, for not only was the play a strong one—Glyde Fitch at his best, which means a good deal, but also it was well held up by the entire company. The individual members showed their professionalism, and it was appreciated.

The play told the old, old story which is ever new, that of the man who plunges into the abyss of indebtedness following the vain hope of making millions, and how it finally led him into the embezzlement of funds entrusted him by a friend. Richard Buhler carried the part, that of Dick Sterling, well, his acting being at times a trifle forced, making, on the whole, however, a distinct impression on the audience. Opposite him was Frank E. Montgomery, as Edward Warden, a true friend, though in love with Sterling's wife, and his acting reached at times heights that held the audience spell-bound until he had finished. Miss Mae Keane, taking the part of Mrs. Sterling, was excellent. Others in the company supported the leaders in good shape, and the two members of the company who made a distinct hit were those who did the specialties between acts, the pretty little soubrette winning applause from everyone in the audience as well as keeping them in a roar of laughter by her clever songs and dances. Sonny Cunha turned loose some of the best orchestral music that has been heard in a theater here for a long time. His choice was good, for he played selections from new and old comic operas.

TENYO MARU MAKES FAST TRIP

U. S. cruiser St. Louis, now in this port.

The wireless she carries can talk at 140 miles. It is the invention of O. Asano and M. Salke, engineers, Department of Communication, and is called Tel-shin-sho. Asano represented the Japanese Government at the International Wireless Telegraph Conference at Berlin in 1906.

No official messages were among those sent from the Tenyo while she was still off port. She had one for Captain Gleaves of the St. Louis and two for Hackfeld.

On July 1st, the international stations will be formally opened, and then official messages while she is still at sea will be possible. It is probable that all of the Marus will now be fitted with the wireless appliances, and all of the new boats for this line as they are built will be so equipped.

The Tenyo Maru is a naval reserve ship, and her operator is a naval man, appointed by the Japanese Government.

On the trip over, dances were held on the spacious decks, and various entertainments planned for, which will be held during the remainder of the trip to the Coast. Among them are two fancy dress balls, and an athletic day, the latter to be held tomorrow.

She has facilities for the publication of a newspaper daily, but has so far gotten out no number, as the compositor has been nonestibus. She will have the daily news aboard, however, for the rest of the trip. The paper is to be published in English.

She lands 24 passengers in this port. She will carry out in the cabin tomorrow 158 persons.

She had 99 Japanese, 1 Chinese, and 14 Hindus in the steerage for this port.

She also had one Japanese stow-away.

The craft is a magnificent one, the queen of the Pacific. She will be open this afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock for the public. Ernest Kaul's orchestra will perform, meanwhile. The vessel is of 21,000 tons displacement, 14,000 tons gross and 7265 tons net. She has five decks. She is also a triple-screw turbine, the only one of its kind running to these waters. Her accommodations are palatial; the promenades roomy; the fittings beautiful. She is worth seeing.

This morning she had a list to starboard owing to the fact that she used her oil from one side, to take on more here. She will receive about 5500 barrels.

Prominent among her passengers are: K. Hayashida, secretary general of the House of Representatives; K. Yabashi, official of finance, bound for London; G. Takeda, deputy, Imperial Japanese Government; G. M. Arakawa, Minister Plenipotentiary to Mexico; S. Takahashi, vice consul at San Francisco; K. Hamano, a merchant of this city; H. Uchi, Y. Kawahara, M. Ota, and J. Hiramatsu, all merchants of Honolulu; Fred. A. Gardner of the Union Iron Works; C. D. Bunker, a custom broker of San Francisco; D. L. Richardson, secretary of the Japanese Consulate at San Francisco; C. Rickards, Chinese interpreter of San Francisco; Mrs. E. B. Thorn, wife of a Yokohama editor; L. Lambert, lord surveyor, Hongkong; Mrs. M. F. Lowenstein, wife of a partner in a big Manila commercial firm; W. Burns, a naval architect, employed by the Siamese government, now on a leave of absence; and F. S. Farnsworth, the T. K. K. foreign superintendent.

Mrs. McCune, who is a stopover passenger, was suddenly taken sick with appendicitis some days ago at sea, and is to go to the hospital here for treatment.
